MEDALS GIVEN OUTGOING CIVIC GROUP OFFICIALS

The Mokena Civic Association meeting held Monday night in the church parlors of the Immanuel Lutheran church was packed with interesting reports, plans for the forth coming annual Home Coming Festival in September and the presentation of medals to the past president, vice president, sec., and treas.

Arthur Shoop, chairman of the committee on the local community high school project, reported at length on the meeting recently held by his committee with the members of the local school board, County Supt., of Schools Louis Bottino and F. J. Kohlhaugen, township school treasurer of Frankfort township relative to a community high school. Mr. Shoop pointed out that according to ideas exchanged and plans discussed the district would have to extend beyond the confines of Frankfort township into portions of New Lenox and Orland townships. Nothing definite was arrived at. The Association felt Mr. Shoop should continue his investigations into the proposed project and report later.

Past President Robert A. Bechstein reported that work on the skating rink to be located in the local school yard will be started within the next 30 days.

Orville Werner, local hardware man suggested the erection of signs at important highway junction points in the vicinity of Mokena advertising the advantages Mokena offers as a residential center. No action was taken on this.

Stokes Nebeker, chairman of the Boy Scouts committee reported that the Scouts were well organized and that much interest is also being shown in the Girl Scouts.

Owing to press of work as chairman of this committee and as general chairman of the Home Coming Festival, Mr. Nebeker tendered his resignation as chairman of the Social and Entertainment Committee and was succeeded by Everett Cooper who was appointed chairman of this committee.

Paul Roemer who has served as historian of the Association and who is now secretary of the Association, was succeeded by Arthur Shoop as historian.

The Association has made an agreement with the Public Service Co., for a permanent electric light meter at the depot grounds. The meter is to be located on the pole from which the light wires for the Home Coming will be strung.

It was revealed that plans are under way for a larger Home Coming festival this year than those held in previous years. There will be more exhibits, games, etc. Rides will also be featured. The Festival grounds will have to be extended eastward up to the Sippel store. The gala event is to run for three afternoons and evenings, Sept. 13, 14 and 15. Further details of the program of events will be printed later.

At the close of the meeting, Chas. Elder on behalf of the Association presented a sterling silver medal to Past-Pres. Robert A. Bechstein in recognition of the fine services he rendered to the group during his tenure in office. Mr. Bechstein graciously responded expressing his appreciation of the fine sentiment prompting the bestowal of gifts.

Bronze medals were presented to Ludwig Theil as vice president, John Fox, former secretary and Everett Cooper, out going treasurer. The mementos are in the shape of watch charms. On one side the official Indian head insignia of the Association together with the name of the Association is engraved, on the other side appears the name of the officer and date during which he served in his respective office.

TO BREAK GROUND FOR $25,000 UNIT PALOS COMMUNITY CENTER

Architect Jim Pomeroy of Orland Park drew this sketch of the proposed building for the Community Center Foundation in Palos Park. To cost $25,000, the building will have eight floor levels to conform with a steeply sloping hillside. It also will contain an office, a gift shop, craft workshop, group meeting rooms, coat rooms for men and women, and sleeping quarters for overnight guests.

Orland Architect Draws Plans For New Structure

Ground will be broken and construction started next week (July 22) on the first unit of a new building at the Community Center Foundation, 127th St. and South-west Highway, Palos Park.

The Rev. Paul T. Sanders, managing director of the Foundation, said the new structure will provide space for an office, a gift shop, craft workshop, ground meeting rooms, coat rooms for men and women, and sleeping quarters for overnight guests.

To be erected on a sloping hillside the building as designed by Architect Jim Pomeroy of Orland will consist of eight separate levels in conformity with the site.

Chief feature of the plans is the Great Hall, a room containing more than one thousand feet of floor space, and surrounded on three sides by open balconies.

Curved stone steps beside a large open fireplace in the Great Hall lead to a large dining room on a lower level. Two wide roof decks will overlook the surrounding woods and hills. One deck will be used for outdoor sleeping. The other end for moonlight dancing.

Cost of the completed building is estimated at $25,000. It is expected to be ready for use by late fall.

A considerable portion of the brick, stone and heavy timbers to be used in construction of the unit has been acquired from an old building, which recently was razed and the material presented to the Foundation.

The Community Center Foundation is an interdenominational institution. It is located on 80 acres of land adjacent to the vast Palos Forest Preserve. The land was given to the organization by Ernest G. Warner, pioneer Palos Park farmer.

Present facilities consist of eight buildings, used mainly for church retreats and young people's meetings. It also is the southwest headquarters for Youth Hostel groups. It is operated on a non-profit basis by a Board of trustees and the Rev. Paul T. Sanders, a retired Methodist minister.

Rev. Sanders said the new building will at least double the present facilities for carrying on the Foundation's educational and recreational program. Last year, the Foundation served more than 8,000 people, many of them under privileged youngsters who for the first time in their lives saw farm animals, rode horses and pitched hay on the Foundation farm.

The Foundation is well known among church and young people's groups in Harvey, Blue Island, Chicago Heights, Mokena, Oak Lawn, Worth, Evergreen Park, Lockport, and Lemont.

Band concerts will entertain all afternoon. At dusk there will be a torch light balloon parade for the little tots.

New Soft Ball Field At Mokena Dedicated Last Nite

Last night the Mokena Soft Ball Team played a dedication game on the new Robinson Soft Ball Field on the south side of Mokena. This new field is the result of the engineering skill of Alvin Sorenson of Mokena who laid out the field and the lighting which gives the Mokena field one of the finest flood lighting systems for miles around. Twelve 1500 watt electric lights make this one of the best lighted softball fields in the state.

Assisting Mr. Sorenson were Jake Barenz, George Bennett and Walter Schoeneck. It was thru their efforts that the field was put in shape for the Mokena team.

The Mokena team is now booking games with teams from surrounding towns.

A very large crowd attended the dedication game.

Order Audit Bremen Twp. Relief Funds

Mr. Salmon of the Central States Audit Co., of Chicago, made a detailed report of the audit just completed by him of the general corporate and hard road and bridge funds of Bremen Township, at a mass meeting of the tax payers of Bremen Township held in the Midlothian school auditorium last Friday night.

According to the audit, the township books have been very loosely kept for the past 18 years. Checks, orders and bills supporting same were in many instances lost and there were instances listed where no records were available for money paid out. Funds were switched back and forth from the general corporate fund to the relief fund until $1600 are in question whether they belong to the general town fund or relief fund.

According to the audit the town officials have either been incompetent or careless.

Mr. Salmon suggested that in order to prevent any future mix-ups of a like nature, that the township funds should be audited at least twice a year and thus a check kept on the affairs of the township.

There is no direct charge that any one grafted any certain amount, for this would be impossible to prove, but the fact remains that the book-keeping system in use was very loose.

As a result of these revelations and in view of the scandal which involved the Bremen township relief office early the past spring, the Town Board and certain taxpayers advocated an audit of the relief funds of Bremen township.

A petition was circulated recently and the required number of signers obtained for a call for a special town meeting. This petition was filed with Town Clerk Edward Reimer who then published a notice that this special meeting would be held in the Village hall in Tinley Park on July 13th at 2 p.m.

Immediately following the appearance of this notice, Attorney Francis A. Harper of Tinley Park who is the attorney for the Town of Bremen wrote a letter to Town Clerk Reimer saying that the proposed Town Meeting was illegal and that the Village Hall in Tinley Park could not be used for this meeting.

Mr. Reimer, upon receipt of this letter, went to the office of the County Clerk in the County Building in Chicago and laid the case before that official. Mr. Reimer was told that the proposed meeting was legal and could be held.

Mr. Reimer told the gathering at Midlothian Friday night about the letter and said that he would appear before the Village Hall in Tinley Park on the date mentioned and open the meeting and then adjourn it until 2:30 p. m., in the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park.

This arrangement was carried out Saturday afternoon. The special town meeting was called to order in front of the Tinley Park Village Hall by Town Clerk Edw. Reimer at 2 o'clock and adjourned to 2:30 p. m., in the Saenger Hall. Here Town Clerk Edw. Reimer opened the meeting. Nick Zneimer, a real estate man of Midlothian was chosen as moderator and was from then on in charge of the meeting. The following resolution was read and adopted:

RESOLUTION

Be it resolved by the Electors of the Town of Bremen, Cook County, Illinois, in Town Meeting duly assembled:

That the following sums of money or as much thereof as may be authorized by law be and the same hereby are appropriated and set aside for the purpose of paying for the audit of the relief fund accounts of the Town of Bremen for the period from July 1, 1936 to March 26, 1940:

(1) From surplus and unencumbered moneys of the General Corporate Fund of the Town of Bremen levied and collected for the years 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1937 and 1938 and now held by the County Treasurer of Cook County, Illinois, the sum of $2389.99.

(2) From surplus and unencumbered moneys of the Road and Bridge Fund of the Town of Bremen levied and collected for the years 1932, 1933 and 1934, the sum of $1310.01.

A motion was made and seconded that the Central States Audit Co., be engaged to conduct the audit of the Bremen Township Relief Funds.

Wm. Erp, son-in-law of John Clark former highway commissioner of Bremen Township was present and asked Mr. Salmon how much it would cost to make an audit of the relief funds for the past four years, and Mr. Salmon estimated the cost at approximately $3,000 or over. Mr. Erp contended that the meeting was illegal and that no money could be levied to defray the cost of the audit, claiming this could only be done at a regular annual town meeting. Mr. Erp was informed that no levy was being asked for, but an appropriation was being requested to be made from unencumbered funds now on hand by the township. Mr. Erp contended that his father-in-law had $3500 coming from the town of Bremen. He was told that this matter could not be considered at this special meeting.

It is reported that $500,000 was handled by the Bremen Township Relief office from July 1, 1936 to March 26, 1940.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Unnecessary wounds were opened at the Republican convention, according to Carter Field . . . Bitterness, however, is not against Willkie.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Wounds of this Republican national convention will plague the party throughout the presidential campaign. This is the more extraordinary in that it is entirely within the realm of possibility that events between now and election may be such that the issues on which the wounds were made will disappear.

For example, all the bitterness about joining the allies in the war. This writer is still hoping for a miracle, a hope based on the age-old tenacity of the British people, but the cold fact is that our own experts, in confidential reports based on the observation of our army and navy representatives abroad, doubt if Britain can hold out much over a month after the Nazis start their real attack.

Leaving our wishes, whatever they may be, to one side, suppose this happens! What will then become of petty disputes over whether the President aided the allies more than he should? Is it not more likely that the majority of the people of this country will bitterly regret that we did not aid them more, and sooner?

Let us consider another possibility—that the miracle happens, and Britain is still fighting desperately against superior forces with utter conquest a possibility, or a probability as the case may be.

THAT'S A QUESTION

What will be the attitude of most of the people in this country then as election approaches toward the politicians who bitterly assailed President Roosevelt for not having been coldly neutral?

The whole situation is pathetic, from an old-time politician's standpoint, because it was so unnecessary. The Republicans did not have to make helping the allies, or keeping out of war, the issue. They could have concentrated on our own lack of preparedness, despite the fact that more than $7,000,000,000 has been spent on national defense since Roosevelt entered the White House.

It is perfectly true that the administration can make a logical defense for that. But at the moment we are thinking in terms of politics, and not logic. It is frequently a mistake to mix the two. People are not always logical in politics. In fact, they rather seldom are.

It would be terribly difficult for the Democrats to defend that $7,000,000,000 of defense spending in view of the administration's own admission that we are woefully unprepared, and now really need to spend billions for defense.

BITTERNESS HANGS ON

Bitterness galore hangs over from the Philadelphia convention, but amazingly little is directed at Wendell Willkie or any of his supporters in the fight which ended with his nomination.

Naturally the Taft people are bitter, not at Willkie but at the leaders they had counted on for the fifth-ballot showing they expected to result in victory. Specifically, the Taft people had counted on Joe Pew to deliver 50 odd votes from Pennsylvania. They had counted on Alf M. Landon to deliver 18 votes of Kansas. They had counted on Herbert Hoover for scattering votes from all over the country. And finally they had counted on Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg to deliver not only the 38 votes of Michigan but scattering delegates in other delegations.

What the Taft people never realized, apparently, was that of this particular group of leaders only one, Alf Landon, really dominated his delegation.

OUTSTED HAMILTON

Landon had shown his strength in a delegation caucus when all the prestige of John Hamilton as national chairman was not enough to induce the Kansas delegates to reelect Hamilton as national committeeman from the Sunflower state. Landon wanted Hamilton thrown out and thrown out he was.

Landon came to Philadelphia strongly of the opinion that Willkie should not be nominated. He was inclined to favor Taft. But when the Taft lieutenants, not realizing the bitter enmity between Landon and Hoover, kept telling Landon how much Hoover was helping Taft, Landon began to fear that Hoover would be the power behind the throne in the Taft campaign if Taft were nominated, and in his administration if he should be elected.

That was no dish for Landon, so, when Dewey was eliminated and the fight narrowed to Taft and Willkie, he threw the 18 Kansas votes to the victor.

Just why the Taft people counted on Vandenberg may never be made public. It was well known in Washington for 10 days before the convention that, if the Michigan senator could not get the nomination for himself, he would prefer Willkie.

1—Have you been self-indulgent, cynical and pleasure-loving for so many years that you are not sure whether the national anthem is "The Star Spangled Banner" or "Roll Out the Barrel"?

2—Have you yet reached the point where you can scrap the idea that your country is a grab bag, a raffle or a punchboard?

3—Can you examine your conscience critically and deny that you have regarded life as a merry gamble for so long that when anybody mentions 1776 you instinctively yell "Bingo!"?

4—Is it your idea that you are doing your bit for your country when you pay the cigarette taxes, take off your hat to the flag and pay 60 cents to have the radio fixed so you can hear one-third of a patriotic appeal and two-thirds of Fibber McGee?

IV
1—Can you read the careers of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, John Paul Jones, Farragut, Perry and Ethan Allen without ever thinking, "Who took care of the business when they were away?"

My boots, oh, see that they are near Wherever I may be; I hate to go to every blaze— How it depresses me!

That siren on my private car— Please see that it's in shape, For I must speed to fires though I wish I could escape.

Whenever something's burning let Me know without delay, For I must rush straight to it though I'd rather stay away.

Reduction of Starches Good For Arthritis

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN an individual suffering for months with pain in his knee and near-by muscles becomes free of this pain after the removal of his tonsils or one or two teeth, it is hard to persuade him that it was not the infected teeth or tonsils that was causing the pain. Then when he sees the disappearance of joint and muscle pains in others by removal of infected teeth or tonsils, he is fully persuaded that infection is the cause of all painful joints and muscles.

However, infection is not the cause of all cases of joint and nerve and muscle pain. From rapidly accumulating evidence it now appears that neuritis—inflammation of nerves supplying muscles and adjoining tissues—is due in many cases to lack of a certain vitamin—vitamin B₁—in the food. It is because the nervous system is "starved" by not getting its oxygen that neuritis arises.

What causes this starvation? Dr. W. J. McCormick, Toronto, in Medical Record, points out that lack of vitamin B₁ prevents the oxygen of the blood from passing through the fat-like coverings of the muscles to reach the underlying nerves. It is because these nerves are deprived of the necessary amount of oxygen that a change takes place in their structure, and neuritis—pain in muscles and joints—arises.

Fewer Starches, More Fruits.

It is for this reason that many physicians are now having their patients with rheumatism, arthritis and neuritis follow a diet which cuts down on starches and increases the fruits, vegetables and dairy products in the diet.

The foods recommended because they are rich in vitamin B₁ are liver, milk, eggs, beans and whole grain products. The use of brewer's yeast in its regular form or in tablets is sometimes effective in relieving pain, because this in itself supplies the necessary amount of vitamin B₁.

It might well be said, of course, that infection—undiscovered—may be the cause of the pain, as infection uses up oxygen needed by the body processes.

Cancer Is Curable If Treated in Time

LAST year a band of determined women—The Women's Field Army—organized a campaign to tell (a) that cancer is a fatal ailment untreated, and (b) that "cancer is curable" if treated in time.

So successful was last year's campaign that many cases of women have been reported who discovered they had cancer after receiving the army's message, or quite as important, who in finding they did not have cancer were freed from months and possibly years of worry.

That the determined effort of this army of women to save lives made a deep impression on thinking men and women is proved by the enactment of the National Cancer Institute Bill of Congress, the founding of the Chicago Tumor Institute and the establishment of the Child's foundation at Yale.

'Fight Cancer With Knowledge.' The slogan of the army, which is the slogan of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, with headquarters at 1250 Sixth avenue, New York city, is "Fight Cancer With Knowledge." Seventy thousand lives might be saved each year if every man, woman and child knew the following "painless" signs of early cancer and, when they appeared, promptly visited a competent physician. These signals may not mean cancer but suggest an immediate examination.

1. Any persistent lump or thickening, especially in the breast.
2. Any irregular bleeding or discharge from any body openings.
3. Any sore that does not heal—particularly about the tongue, mouth or lips.
4. Persistent indigestion, often accompanied by loss of weight.
5. Sudden changes in the form or rate of growth of a mole or wart.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Would cream and gingerale taken three times daily be beneficial for one trying to increase her weight?

A.—All fat foods, including cream might increase weight if the cream agreed with the individual. Rest is the big factor in increasing weight. A trial of the cream and gingerale could be given for four or six weeks.

Q.—Is the cracking sound of a joint serious?

A.—In most cases this is not serious in itself.

JOB'S REPENTANCE AND RESTORATION

LESSON TEXT—Job 42:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends.—Job 42:10.

The problem of suffering, like every other question arising in man's inquiring heart, finds its true solution in a right view of God. Job found it to be so. As long as he and his friends concentrated their attention on his person and his troubles, they only became more deeply involved in confusion and doubt. Much of their discussion was on a high moral and philosophical plane, and they were all doubtless earnest and capable men, but in the end Job learned, and they learned through him, that the real difficulty was that they did not know God.

Then God Himself appeared and brought before Job a panorama of the glorious works of God and His blessings upon mankind (chaps. 38-41). Where was Job when the world was created (38:4)? Who holds the world together (38:6)? What is the origin of light (38:19)? What about the glory of the snowflake (38:22)? Job is told to consider the hand of God in the animal kingdom (chap. 39) and upon those that dwell in the sea (chap. 41). It dawned upon Job that he had been arguing against the providences of the all-knowing and all-powerful One—the eternal God. In that conviction and the repentance which it brought forth, he experienced—

I. Renewed Fellowship (vv. 1-6). Job came to the realization that he had not really known God Himself until now. His religious experiences and convictions hitherto, precious and important as they were, had been by "the hearing of the ear," but now he had met God and all was changed. Fellowship with the Lord was renewed, but on an infinitely higher plane. Job had a real revival in his life which caused him to "abhor" everything that he had said and done; yes, even to set himself aside and to take God to be all and in all.

Our churches are full of people who only know God by hearsay. They have heard about Jesus Christ since their childhood, but they have never met Him. They have read of the Holy Spirit, but they have never known His power. We need a God-sent revival, one like those of the past which "have broken out like fire . . . consuming dead and outward systems, burning sin like a roaring flame, and casting a new light across men's pathways" (E. L. Douglass).

II. Restored Usefulness (vv. 7-10a).

God's rebuke of Job's friends is significant, for it centers, not in their failure to deal rightly with Job, but their failure properly to represent God. It is a tremendous serious matter to attempt to tell others about God, for in doing so we must not in any way misrepresent Him. To stand before men as religious teachers and leaders and not to know Him so well that we represent Him rightly, is to invite His judgment and condemnation.

Job, on the other hand, was restored to a place of honor and usefulness. His friends, who thought they knew so much more than he about God, are told to ask Job to pray for them. He thus was afforded the opportunity of returning good for evil and was again enabled to serve God in serving his fellow men. Salvation is by faith (Eph. 2:8, 9); but being saved, we are restored to the place of usefulness to God.

III. Returned Prosperity (vv. 10b-13).

The abundant blessing of God upon Job is described in oriental terms of money, herds of cattle, and of a large family. These are the tangible evidences of God's blessing, and even to us today they speak of a liberal and loving God. God can and does prosper His own obedient children even in material things.

Such outward mercies, however, only feebly represent the blessings of the soul, the ultimate and eternal joys of the spirit. They point us, it is true, to the assurance that as we yield ourselves in unconditional obedience to God's will, we may confidently trust Him with the dark days of sorrow and affliction, as well as the days of sunshine and prosperity. No matter how tangled may seem the threads on this side of the loom, we know that the heavenly Father behind the scenes is weaving the pattern of beauty which shall one day be revealed as we stand complete in Christ.

Death of Saul

So Saul died for his transgression which he transmitted against the Lord, even against the word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it.—I Chronicles 10:13.

Temptation

ENTERTAINING WHEN THE WEATHER'S WARM (See Recipes Below)

If the mercury seems likely to pop right through the top of the thermometer, and guests are coming for dinner, you can still keep cool!

Plan your menu to permit as much preparation as possible in the cooler hours of the morning. Remember, when you plan the meal, that quality rather than quantity will please your guests, and that a beautiful, cool, crisp salad will be more appetizing, by far, than all the complicated hot dishes you can name!

It's wise, of course, to include one hot food in your menu, even though the weather's torrid. There's something about the contrast of hot foods and cold that makes a meal more pleasant to the taste (and to the digestion, as well).

A cup of clear, hot soup, which might be prepared the day before and reheated just before serving, a hot main dish that's not too hearty or just a hot beverage, if you prefer it, will do the trick.

You'll find menus and tested recipes for all kinds of summer entertaining in my cook book, "Easy Entertaining." There are menus (and recipes) for teas, for buffet suppers, children's parties, and for a wedding reception, too.

Orange-Grape-Pear Salad in Ice-Lined Salad Bowl.

(Serves 8)
Oranges, pears, grapes—summer's juiciest fruits—in an ice-chilled salad bowl! What a decorative answer to every cook's prayer for something tempting to serve on hot weather menus. For a buffet party, serve it in a double bowl with ice to keep the salad chilled to just the right degree.

With a sharp knife, peel 8 oranges, removing skin and inner membrane down to juicy meat. Cut in thin even slices. (California oranges are firm-meated and practically seedless, which makes them especially suited to slicing.) Peel and core 4 pears. Cut in slices. Halve and seed 2 cups of grapes. Combine fruits and put in salad bowl, which has been lined with romaine and watercress. These two salad greens incidentally give an interesting color contrast of light and dark green that is refreshing and that may well be used in any salad.

Serve with sweet french dressing. Sweet French Dressing.
½ cup lemon juice
½ cup salad oil
½ cup red jelly or honey
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
Shake well before serving. The lemon juice gives a flavor to dressings that is especially good with fruit salads. (Makes 1½ cups.)

Sparkling Vegetable Soup.
(Serves 8)
4 pounds beef shin
2½ quarts water
1 tablespoon salt
4 sprigs parsley
2 bay leaves
10 pepper corns
3 whole cloves
½ cup sliced carrot
½ cup sliced onion
½ cup celery and celery leaves

Have bones cracked at the market. Wipe bone and meat with cloth. Remove half the meat from the bone, and cut in 1-inch cubes. Brown the meat on all sides, add bones, remaining meat and water. Add remaining ingredients and bring to a boil. Skim, then simmer for 3 to 4 hours, with the lid of the kettle tilted slightly. Strain through sieve lined with cheese cloth, and cool quickly, uncovered. Chill until fat is solid, then remove fat. To clarify the soup, allow 1 egg white and crushed shell mixed with 2 tablespoons of cold water, for each quart of stock. Add to cold stock and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add ¼ cup cold water, and let settle until cold. Carefully strain through 4 thicknesses of cheese cloth wrung out of very cold water.

Just before serving, add vegetables as follows:

½ cup tomato (cut very fine)
½ cup carrot (diced fine)
½ cup new cabbage (cut very fine)
½ cup celery (cut very fine)
2½ cups water
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons parsley (minced)

Cook tomato, carrot, cabbage and celery in boiling, salted water, just until the vegetables are tender. Strain, and add to hot soup just before serving. Garnish with minced parsley.

Waffled Strawberry Shortcake.

2 cups pastry flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
3 eggs—separated
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons melted butter

Mix and sift all dry ingredients. Beat egg yolks and add to them the milk and melted butter. Stir liquid mixture into dry ingredients. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Bake in hot waffle iron, leaving iron closed until steam no longer escapes between the two halves.

Rice Rolls.
(Makes 3 dozen)
½ cup cooked rice
½ cup liquid from rice
½ cup milk
½ cup shortening
2 teaspoons salt
6 tablespoons sugar
1 yeast cake softened in ¼ cup lukewarm water
1 egg (beaten)
5 cups flour

Drain the cooked rice thoroughly. Combine ½ cup of the water in which the rice was cooked, with ½ cup milk and scald. Pour over the shortening, salt, and sugar, cool slightly, and add the rice. Combine softened yeast with the beaten egg and add to the cooled milk mixture. Beat in about half of the flour, and mix well. Add remaining flour. Place in greased bowl, grease top of dough slightly and cover the bowl. Allow dough to rise until double in bulk (about 1½ hours). Punch down, and let rise again for about 45 minutes. Shape into small balls and place in greased muffin pans. Let rise until double in bulk, then brush with milk. Bake in a moderately hot oven with the thermostat set at 400 degrees, for about 20 minutes.

Jellied Ham Salad.
(Serves 6)
2 cups cooked ham (finely ground)
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sweet pickle (cut fine)
2 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
2 cups water
1 tablespoon granulated unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 cup cooked ham (cut in small strips)

Combine ground ham, mayonnaise and pickle and blend thoroughly. Chill. Add cloves and bay leaf to water and boil for about 5 minutes. Then strain. Add gelatin which has been soaked in cold water and stir until dissolved. Chill until mixture begins to thicken; then add ham mixture. Pour in individual salad molds and chill 2 or 3 hours, or until set. Unmold on crisp lettuce or watercress, top with mayonnaise and strips of cooked ham and serve very cold.

Cheese Cornucopias—Salad Accompaniment.

Cheese cornucopias are an unusual, but delicious, salad accompaniment. Make ordinary pastry as for pie and roll out. Make tiny cornucopias (about 3 inches long) from any stiff paper. Wrap pastry around cornucopia and bake 12 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees). Remove paper and when cool, fill cornucopias with highly flavored cream cheese. Serve with any salad.

RADISHES, carrots and onions—in fact the whole vegetable garden has been worked up into delectable tea towel motifs. Bright cross stitch borders frame these seven corner designs, and a clever idea is illustrated suggesting the use of vegetable motifs on an apron.

From hot iron transfer Z9194, 15 cents, you receive the tea towel motifs and the apron designs. Any of the tea towel motifs could be made up into a panholder to make a complete kitchen set. Send order to:

Common Sense
About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to "cure" it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

There was a time in America when there were no set prices. Each merchant charged what he thought "the traffic would bear." Advertising came to the rescue of the consumer. It led the way to the established prices you pay when you buy anything today.

Generous Run Of Grass Fed Cattle Reported

Reported by John Clay Co.

The first generous run of grass cattle of the season showed up around the market circuit this week. Kansas and Oklahoma dropped a liberal supply of steers on southwestern markets and will continue to unload their Flint Hill, Blue Stem and Osage pastures stock during the next few months. Grass sows are making up around 35 per cent of the hog run, while Idaho and Washington are shipping grass-fat lambs freely.

Early this week increased supplies of grass cattle resulted in a downward revision of rates where that class was concerned, while strictly dry feds, particularly yearlings, held steady. Hogs, too, saw prices favoring the buyer, with lambs continuing in a slump. Beef steer values, however, continue over $1 per cwt. higher than a year earlier, with hogs about 20c per cwt. under that time and lambs slightly better despite the late drop.

Meat stocks increased last month despite rising livestock prices, which would make it seem that processors consider the product "worth the money". All meats and edible offal at the outset of the month totaled largest in six years for this particular period of the year. Poultry stocks are 22 per cent more than a year ago and 43 per cent over the five-year average.

With the export trade of small volume and the run of lard hogs seasonally large, holdings of lard increased to new all-high record volume, now being more than double a year ago. Reserves stock of beef are greatest in three years for a July and pork in storage has not been exceeded in six years for a July. Lamb and mutton total greatest in 10 years for a July.

Final Steps Taken On Cook County Zoning Ordinance

Final steps toward passage of the new Cook county zoning ordinance, which will affect 323,410 acres outside the boundaries of incorporated villages and cities, are being taken this week. Of this total area, 152,076 acres are on the southwest side.

The county board is expected to vote next month on the new ordinance, which has been in preparation for about a year by the county zoning commission headed by Robert Kingery. The new ordinance will replace the temporary one that has been in effect since last March.

Public hearings on the new zoning law were completed last week. Objections voiced to the commission members at these meetings or afterward will be forwarded to the county board. Any provision of the ordinance that is formally objected to will be passed only by a three-fourths majority.

In Rear of Parade

Cook county was one of the last counties in the Chicago area to frame a zoning ordinance to guide the future development of its unincorporated territory. Lake, DuPage and Kane counties already have such ordinances. Efforts toward a similar ordinance for Will county are now being made.

The southwest side's 152,076 acres lie in 11 townships: Worth, Calumet, Thornton, Stickney, Rich, Palos, Orland, Lyons, Lemont, Bremen and Bloom.

Bloom outranks the others in point of unincorporated territory, with 22,450 acres. Orland township is next with 21,761 acres and Palos is third with 20,817 acres.

More than three-fourths of the southwest side's outlying area, or about 128,000 acres, is zoned for farming under the proposed new ordinance. The rest falls into the three other major classifications—industrial, business and residential.

A total of 15,690 of the unincorporated acres southwest of Chicago are zoned for residential building. Palos township is the only one in this part of the city for which 5 acre homesites are specified. The new ordinance sets aside 1,210 acres with that restriction, all of it adjoining the DuPage county line between 59th and 91st streets.

10,000 Foot Minimum
Elsewhere the minimum size requirements for building sites are 40,000 square feet or about one acre, 20,000 square feet and 10,000 square feet.

All residential territory in three of the townships—Bremen, Lemont, and Stickney—falls in the 10,000 foot category. Four others—Palos, Thornton, Worth and Calumet—will permit nothing smaller than 20,000 square feet in some areas. Bloom, Lyons, Orland and Rich have areas in all four residential classifications.

The southwest side is zoned for more industrial area than any other part of Cook county. The new ordinance establishes this zoning for a total of 7,900 acres, principally in Stickney, Lyons and Bloom townships.

A total of 586 acres in southwestern Cook county is zoned for business in the proposed ordinance.

About half of this area is in four townships: Worth, Calumet, Lyons and Bloom.

The business classification is subdivided into two classes, one permitting only stores and other ordinary business uses and the other allowing taverns and amusement places.

Few Tavern Zones

The southwest side has comparatively little tavern zoning. The principal areas zoned so are on Cicero avenue along Archer avenue south of 110th street on Southwest boulevard between Oak Lawn and Chicago Ridge and at such intersections as Harlem-79th, Wolf-159th and 96th avenue-159th street.

In some of the public hearings property owners protested that there should be fewer tavern zones. Kingery assured the objectors that their protests would be weighed by the zoning commission and the county board.

European War Reduces Farm Export Market

Federal Government Plans To Cushion Effect on Agriculture.

WASHINGTON.—Plans to overcome the unfavorable effect of the war upon American agriculture are being drawn up by the federal government through the office of foreign agricultural relations.

While the war has been hurting the farmers, agricultural department experts believe that when peace is resumed, the after-effects will be far worse. They are convinced that farm prices will continue to suffer unless the war lasts more than three years, when increased foreign buying will begin to bolster the market.

Complete governmental control of the economies of belligerents has marked the present conflict. The wars in Europe and in the Orient have assumed an economic character through the widespread use of blockade and counter-blockade.

Blockade Closes Markets. Allied naval blockade closed central Europe's markets to American goods. German occupation of Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France, and the entrance of Italy into the war barred American products from almost the whole of Europe. Some of these nations had been among this country's best farm markets.

Agricultural exports were also seriously affected when the allies pooled their economic and financial resources and centralized purchases through a government commission. This effect was increased when England shifted as much of her food purchases to her dominions as was possible. She took this step to save her foreign exchange for the purchase of war necessities.

British imports of cotton and wheat—this country's two principal export crops—has dwindled greatly. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace estimates that exports of American agricultural products in the fiscal year which began July 1 will be at least 30 per cent below last year. This will mark an 80 per cent decrease below the level attained in the first World War.

England's Market. Continuation of the war through 1942 may force Great Britain to purchase a larger proportion of her agricultural supplies from the United States. The agricultural department warns, however, that by this time the belligerents would be approaching financial exhaustion. American agricultural products would be needed, but nobody could pay for them.

"It appears likely that both belligerents and neutrals will find it advisable or necessary to continue many of the economic controls established during the war," the department added.

American trade can be reconstructed after the war only so far as a way is found to finance the transactions. Foreign countries can purchase American products only by exchange of goods or through the shipment of gold to this country.

The department points out that use of gold will be difficult because the United States has most of the world's supply.

Australia to Speed Plane Production, Training of Pilots

CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA.—A program for making Australia one of the front rank world air powers by March, 1943, has been announced by Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies.

It involves an increase of 11 times the present program for training pilots, observers, gunners and aircraftmen and an increase of seven times in the present program for the production of aircraft.

This would give Australia by the time the program is in full operation in March, 1943, a total aviation personnel of 57,473 and an air force of about 2,000 planes. With the program and production then in full operation, Prime Minister Menzies believes that Australia can increase the air force each year until it ranks with the most powerful air nations in the world.

Large Gain This Year.

Under the program as launched, Australia will have 28,500 trained men, consisting of crews, pilots and ground personnel by June, 1941. By June, 1942, an additional 18,012 will have been trained and by March, 1943, when the entire program will be in full operation, an additional 10,961 will have been trained, giving Australia an aviation personnel of 57,473, which will be maintained thereafter.

For carrying out the program there will be installed as rapidly as possible three initial ground training schools; 10 elementary flying training schools; four air observers' schools; four bombing and gunnery schools; four wireless operators' schools; and two air navigation schools.

Menzies announced that this rapid increase in aviation, coupled with the rapid growth that is taking place in the military and naval program, is intended to make Australia capable of defending itself.

Can Baby Elephant Survive? Asks Science as Birth Nears

Upper photo shows a group of children enjoying a visit with their favorite zoo friend—the elephant. Right—This is Nancy, about whom naturalists are speculating regarding the care she will give her prospective offspring. No baby elephant in previous history in the United States has survived.

By RICHARD A. KELLY
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
CHICAGO, ILL.—Naturalists have their eyes turned toward Brookfield zoo, near Chicago. For there some time during August or September, a baby elephant is expected to be born.

This is a big event, not only because of the principals involved, but because it may provide the answer to a riddle that has puzzled scientists for generations. Will the baby pachyderm thus born in captivity live and be successfully reared to adulthood?

Never before in the United States has a baby elephant survived infancy. So, as the keepers at the zoo are preparing the colossal obstetrical ward for Nancy, a buxom, five-ton Ceylonese elephant, scientists are asking each other what are the chances of her offspring growing up into a fine, strapping pachyderm.

Based on experience tables, these chances seem rather dim. Four times before in history in this country a female elephant has labored and brought forth young. Four times did she attempt to murder her calf and then savagely refuse to nurse it. Four times did the baby jumbos die after a short and pathetic existence. The mother in each of these cases was Princess Alice, an elephantine trouper with the Sells-Floto circus of a generation ago.

Tragic Jinx? But will the tragic jinx that followed Princess Alice also pursue Nancy? Not necessarily, says Robert Bean, curator of mammals at the Brookfield zoo.

"In the case of the previous four births," he said, "because the same mother bore all four calves, it is possible that she was an exception which might not occur again. She evidently had some idiosyncrasy that made motherhood murderously distasteful to her. Her experience does not necessarily mean that all female elephants would behave the same way. It is a matter of record that one elephant calf was born and successfully reared in a Berlin, Germany, zoo. The same thing might occur at the Brookfield zoo.

"It is well known, however, that some species of elephants do not reproduce in captivity. Because of the extreme rarity of elephant births their reaction cannot be predicted.

Nancy Is Docile. "Nancy, unlike her predecessor, Princess Alice, is a docile animal. She is only 24 years old, or much younger than Alice. We are preparing to take every precaution to prevent accidents from marring a successful birth. Nancy will be given every encouragement possible to be a normal mother. She will not be separated from the other elephants unless it becomes absolutely necessary.

"We hope that accustomed surroundings will have a calming effect and induce Nancy to assume her motherly duties toward her baby at once.

"If she refuses, however, the little calf will be fed cows' milk. We believe this will be a successful dietary procedure if the young elephant is closely watched for adverse effects."

So, in the weeks to come, the answer will be found to the question whether a baby elephant can survive infancy in America. If the answer is yes, then a new trend will begin.

But if the answer is no, then the story of Princess Alice may be repeated. That story made newspaper headlines before and during the World War. It was immortalized in a chapter in Bene Fowler's book, "Timberline."

First in United States. It was on a spring afternoon in 1912, near the close of the matinee that Princess Alice delivered the first baby elephant ever born in America. Fred Ailspaw, the circus elephant trainer and his aides, were midwives. As a precaution during labor, they pulled a burlap sack over her eyes. But once the infant was born, things began to happen.

"The nearness of humans enraged the mother," writes Fowler. "She lowered her great head, flexed her wrinkled knees and then rolled upon her baby, with intent to kill. Ailspaw tried to reassure her, to implore Alice to rise of her own free will. Her answer was a lashing blow of the trunk, knocking the trainer a full 20 feet across the sawdust floor.

"She had shaken off the burlap blinder, glimpsing her 180-pound son afresh and renewing the murderous attack. Attendants used wooden bars as levers to pry her heaving belly from the squealing newcomer. They applied elephant hooks to her defiant trunk and brought other persuasive instruments into play. Finally the hysterical mother reared to fight off the men, and now they dragged the bewildered, half-suffocated calf to safety. He stood as though puzzled by a world which greeted strangers with such sudden, ugly brutality."

Description of Calf. The calf, relates Mr. Fowler, looked like a "fatigued ant-eater, was pink all over and had a trunk six inches long. Black hairs bristled from his blushing hide. He was 24 inches high and 36 from tip to tail."

Zoologists everywhere were concerned with the youngster's future. The mother refused to nurse it. She attempted to kill it when it approached. The baby was fed a mixture of Jersey milk and condensed milk from a bottle. Two months after birth it fell ill and died. An autopsy revealed a putty-like substance in the calf's large intestines, indicating digestive faults.

Three times more within six years was this tragic story repeated. Each time Princess Alice tried to crush her infant to death and each time attendants were able to save the calf after a tremendous battle. All of the baby elephants died within a few weeks from the same cause: digestive disturbances.

Event Attracts Attention. Twenty-two years have passed since the birth and death of the last baby elephant in America. Thus interest inevitably centers on Nancy's approaching accouchement at the Brookfield zoo.

Whether it lives or not, Nancy's baby will be the hugest ever born at the zoo. Although a hippopotamus weighs 4,000 pounds, its offspring weigh less than 50. An elephant calf tips the scales close to 200 pounds and stands about three feet high.

U. S. Ignition Invention Supercharges Bombers

A new aircraft ignition distribution system which will give military planes enough added power to make them supercharged ships at any altitude has been announced by one of the large airline companies in the United States.

The government has approved the plans following flight experiments, according to one of the officers of the company. Carl E. Swanson, a former faculty member of the University of Minnesota Institute of Technology, is the inventor.

Aircraft ignition steps up through this new system by the complete elimination of contaminations. This is accomplished by pumping the chemically treated air through the shielding cables. This air goes through a number of different processes before it is ready.

Adopt a Skunk?
Low Oil Production

At least 40 per cent of the Caucasian race, which is generally supposed to comprise the white branches of the human species, is composed of people such as the Hindus and Arabs, whose skin is dark brown, and others such as the Ethiopians, whose color is nearly black.

As the London zoo is low in funds, several hundred people have come to its rescue by adopting an animal. They pay for its food and, in return, have their generosity acknowledged on a sign attached to the animal's cage. Three lions, two giraffes, a gorilla and a skunk are still awaiting adoption.

The blind people of the United States are engaged in about 425 different regular occupations.

Although there are oil wells in this country capable of producing up to as much as 185,000 barrels a day, the average daily production per well is less than 10 barrels. In Pennsylvania, it is less than half a barrel.—Collier's.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

SO MANY of you have written me letters of appreciation about the new SEWING BOOK 5 that I want to thank you all here at one time. In Book 1 is sketched and described methods of making slip covers, curtains, bedspreads, dressing tables and other things for the house. Next came Book 2 with gifts, novelties and a glossary of embroidery stitches. Then, in Book 3, I began to share with you some of the human interest side of this fascinating job of mine, and to tell you about the adventures of many clever women who make the things that they want for their homes—sometimes from almost nothing. There were more of these adventures in Book 4, and there are still more in Book 5.

I am glad that everything needed is in today's sketch about this re-modeled washstand because I have used up all my space now; and the frill around the top shelf is five inches deep. Books are 10 cents each. Send order to:

TRAILER GIRL

THE STORY THUS FAR

Lynn Morrow, beautiful blonde New York girl, is stranded in Palm Beach in her bathing suit with only 50 cents when her employer, Mrs. Helen Warren, disappears with car and trailer from a camp where she, Buddy, her son, and Lynn had been living. A note from Mrs. Warren advises Lynn to call at her New York attorney's office for her clothes and wages. She is rescued by Terry McNair, whom she met at the beach. She goes to his home, where he has a maid provide her with some of his sister's evening clothes. They then go to a beach club. His sister appears and a quarrel ensues. Lynn accepts the help of a stranger to escape. He takes her to his home where he identifies himself as Raymond (Wild) Austin. He accuses her of trying to blackmail him. Greatly incensed, Lynn flees. Stopping at a coffee shop, she meets a young artist, Rene Boucher, who is returning to New York by trailer and offers to take her there. They enjoy roughing it along the road. She finds Rene to be a decent sort of a fellow.

CHAPTER III—Continued

Lynn was in the driver's seat and Rene, beside her, directed operations. Things went along smoothly, for Lynn took the road at a slow, even pace. Before they had gone five miles, Rene was asleep. The girl drove on until they came to a small town, and she stopped in front of the first garage. Rene awakened with a start. Lynn smiled and urged Rene to go back into the trailer and sleep.

"I'll drive carefully, honestly I will."

But Rene preferred to doze in the car. "I want to be sure we get out of Florida tonight. We'll go on and stop before dark. We've got to shop, anyway. There isn't anything to eat in the place."

They picked up some groceries in a small town where they were allowed to park on the street for ten minutes. When Rene came back with his arms full of purchases, he threw a New York paper into Lynn's lap.

"Four days old, but we'll know what's going on in the home town!"

"Home town? I came from Vermont."

"I'm from Ohio, myself, but I'm a New York painter just the same," he retorted.

They finally halted for the night ten miles out of Kingsland, Ga. Both of them were tired, but they'd made a good day's run. Rene pulled the trailer over on a side road. "I've got steak for supper and some potatoes," he said.

Lynn set to work, while Rene read the New York paper. He was deep in the sport page when Lynn was setting the table. She glanced over his shoulder as he read there on the settee. There was a large picture of a smiling young man receiving a golf trophy.

"Oh!" Lynn cried out, startled. "That's the man!"

"What man?"

"The one who followed us last night."

"You mean this guy?" Rene demanded, pointing to the picture on the sport page. Lynn nodded.

"Listen, child, you made a mistake! 'Wild' Austin has all the money in the world! You should have stayed in Florida!"

Rene looked up at Lynn speculatively. She had made no explanation of the matter of the night before.

"You aren't an heiress running away, are you?"

"Of course not! You saw 'It Happened One Night'! That's your trouble. And as for 'Wild' Austin, I hate him! I never want to hear his name again." Then Lynn had to rush and rescue the smoking steak.

CHAPTER IV

"The steak's swell. Best meal I've had in weeks," Rene declared as he fell to it.

When they had finished and were sitting with their coffee, Lynn, her elbows on the table, brushed back her hair and remarked:

"Why do they call him that?"

Rene, knowing quite well what she meant, said:

"Wild, Wild Austin."

"Because he is, I guess," Rene said as he lighted his pipe. "He's been in a lot of scrapes. I know some woman sued him for breach of promise or something. His brother's just like him, having a big fight with his wife. There was a lot in the papers about it before I left."

"I suppose I should explain about last night—"

"It is not necessary."

She told him her story.

"I know what you're thinking—three strange young men in one day."

"And such young men. That McNair is a big shot, too, Lynn."

The girl's cheeks flushed, there was disbelief in Rene's cool eyes.

"I'm telling you the truth. How did you suppose I know how to work in this trailer? I'm a house maid, I tell you!"

Rene laughed. "Here I was making up all kinds of romantic stories about you."

"I'm sorry I'm not more exciting."

"Well, it did seem funny, when you told me it was that Austin chap who was chasing you. I can't understand why you ran away."

"Oh, Rene! When he accused me of being an adventuress, of wanting to sue him or something, it was too terrible. I couldn't believe he really meant it. If he hadn't been so awful, I'd never had courage to run off with you like this."

"Well, it was pretty tough on you. But lucky for me. I needed a cook!"

Rene began to laugh. "It is funny!"

"Well, it wasn't very funny to me."

"I mean your being left in a bathing suit, flat in Florida."

Lynn smiled wryly: "I can't look at it that way."

"I wonder why Mrs. Warren went off and left you?"

"I haven't the faintest idea."

Suddenly Lynn stretched out her hand and touched Rene's arm.

"Maybe some day I can repay you for everything you've done for me."

"Forget it."

"You see, I haven't any relatives except a married sister. She is up in Bangor. She's older than I, and, well, I couldn't ask her husband to support me, too. Besides things aren't going any too well with them."

"I know. My mother died last year. I kept my nose to the grindstone. I had her to support. Then when she was gone, I decided I'd begin to see something of this country. Well, I did. But I suppose I'm not much of a business man. Money just seems to go. I thought I had plenty when I came down here."

Then the two went out to watch the early sunset. It set in a bank of clouds which promised rain. Lynn came in finally and washed the dishes.

When Rene came in, the oil lamp was lighted and Lynn was looking again at the New York paper. She threw it down quickly when Rene came in the door.

"I want to show you some of my sketches," he said, "What did you do with them?"

Lynn opened one of the deep drawers under her bunk. They were piled there neatly. Rene handed her the picture full of white sunlight and wind arrested Lynn.

a water color of some bathers on the beach. It was a slight thing, and until that moment it had not occurred to Lynn to wonder whether or not Rene was a good painter.

The picture arrested the girl. It was full of white sunlight, and wind. "It's good!" she exclaimed taking it nearer to the oil lamp.

"Thanks."

"Oh, I'm not much of a critic, but I've always loved pictures. Let me see some more."

They spent an hour over the sketches, and then Rene declared he was tired. They had agreed on an early start in the morning. With nine hours' sleep they felt they would be ready to forge ahead through Georgia. Rene got some blankets together, to go out into the car, when Lynn looked out the door.

"It's raining hard, Rene," she said. "I don't think you should sleep in the car tonight."

"I'll be all right."

"No, that is not fair. I'm crew. There are two bunks here. I saw a curtain rolled up in the clothes closet today."

She went and got out some crumpled yards of gingham.

"We'll rig this up. That's what Mrs. Warren always did. It makes complete little rooms."

Rene patted her arm. "Good girl! You're a real sport. I'll fix that, Lynn. I'll admit I didn't relish sleeping in the back seat of that car. I'm dead for sleep."

So that was the way it was arranged. Lynn kept her bunk at the front of the trailer, Rene's was on the sofa at the dining table. Lynn folded away the table, made up his bed while he went out to check everything for the night, to throw a piece of canvas over the motor.

"I have to nurse the old wreck along," he said. "If it gets wet, we'll never get her started."

Lynn awakened first the next morning. It was a pleasant day. Quietly she slipped out of the trailer, wearing the only bathrobe Rene possessed. There was a stream nearby and Lynn bathed her face there, and dabbled her feet in the cold water. It was a lovely morning. Like Spring, but cool, for they were now farther north.

With a light heart she went back to the trailer, got into her overalls, and began rattling dishes in the galley.

"How long before breakfast?"

Rene called in a sleepy voice.

"Ten minutes. Hurry!"

Rene got up, called for the bathrobe, which Lynn threw to him over their gingham partition.

"That brook's a nice place for a bath," she said.

"I won't be five minutes," he promised.

Rene was in great spirits. The weather this morning was perfect. More like a Northern Spring. Everything was green and fresh after the rain. He sang as he drove, and he told Lynn about his dreams.

"What I want more than anything in the world is to go abroad for a year to study. I've got to get to work and make some money somehow." He lapsed into silence. "Now I better let you tell me about yourself."

"I just want a job, that's all!"

"What kind of a job? What's your ambition?"

"Ambition for me is foolish. I can't paint, I can't sing or dance, I can work with my hands, that's about all. I'm through high school and I can type a little. That's the extent of my accomplishments."

"Wouldn't you like to go into the movies?"

"No."

"What do you want?"

Lynn hesitated: "What most girls want deep in their hearts, I suppose, a home, a husband and children."

At lunch time Lynn got their food ready as Rene drove, and then they stopped on the roadside and ate it. It must have been late afternoon when they crossed into South Carolina. The wind was colder, but the sun was still bright. They were discussing where they should stop for the day when the motor began to knock violently.

"Lord, something's wrong with this car!" Rene stopped and got out and opened the hood. Lynn smiled at his hopeless air. She could imagine what Rene would be as a mechanic. They pulled off the highway and reconnoitered. There was a farm house about a quarter of a mile down the road.

"Let's go down there. We can buy fresh milk, and maybe they'll have a telephone. I think we can make it."

Lynn thought afterward how different things might have been if they'd never visited the Lovell farm.

When they came limping up the edge of the big farmyard, the farmer who was pumping water at the well came out to the road.

"How far to town?" Rene asked.

"About five miles."

"Can I get you to tow me in?"

Rene asked, getting out to unfasten his car from the trailer.

The man got his own car out of the garage, and they hitched Rene's sick automobile on with a chain.

"Will it be all right to leave my trailer here? We'll probably be stuck overnight."

"Sure. You and your wife can stay at the house if she wants to," the man added.

CHAPTER V

Lynn, standing at the door of the trailer, heard the farmer's offer of hospitality.

"Oh!" It had never occurred to Lynn that she and Rene might have to explain their unconventional but highly proper situation.

Then she forced herself to prepare supper. For Rene would be hungry when he came back. As she was lighting the stove, Mrs. Lovell, the farmer's wife, walked down through the barnyard and knocked at the door.

"I thought you folks might like some fresh milk. And here are a couple of pieces of apple pie. There's just you and your husband?"

"Yes," Lynn managed the word.

"What did you say his business was?"

"He's a painter."

"My, that's nice. He can keep things up around the trailer. Now when Melvin tries to paint he makes such a mess of everything."

Lynn did not go into details about what kind of a painter Rene was.

"You folks must be just married," Lynn murmured something and she blushed violently.

"Now, I won't tell a soul. I know how sensitive you honeymooners are."

Lynn was about at the end of her rope when Mrs. Lovell heard a car drive in.

Lynn knew from Rene's face that there was something seriously wrong with the car.

"I'm afraid we'll be tied up for a day at least," he said as he came over to the trailer.

"Pa, why don't you have him paint the garage—that is, if they've got to stay over? He's a painter, his wife tells me."

"That so? How about it, Boucher?"

Lynn expected to hear him decline with vigor.

"That's not a bad idea. How much would you figure the job worth?" he asked.

"How long would it take you?" asked the farmer.

"I better let it over," Rene replied, and walked over to the garage.

JENNY WREN GOSSIPS WITH CHATTERER

What's the harm of gossiping upon a pleasant day? It's nothing but a means, you know, to pass the time away.

IT ALL depends. Yes, sir; it all depends. If you gossip about pleasant things there is no harm. But if—well, if you gossip about other people and their affairs you may get somebody into a great deal of trouble.

Now, Jenny Wren is a great gossip. Everybody knows that. Her tongue is going from morning to night. For the most part it is harmless gossip, but not always. She didn't mean it to be harmless this morning as she settled herself in the old apple tree nearest the stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard and at once began to gossip with Chatterer the Red Squirrel. No, sir, Jenny Wren didn't mean it to be harmless. The fact is, she had deliberately set out to make trouble for Bully the English Sparrow.

"Good morning, Chatterer!" exclaimed Jenny.

"Good morning, Chatterer!" exclaimed Jenny. "I hope you are feeling as well as you look."

"I should put it the other way," grinned Chatterer, who happened to be in the best of spirits that morning. "I hope I look as well as I feel, because in that case I must look very fine indeed."

"You do," declared Jenny. "You never have looked better in your life. I believe you are actually growing handsome."

Chatterer pretended not to notice

this flattery, but Jenny's sharp eyes saw that he was tickled, and she went on.

"That red coat of yours is one of the handsomest coats I know of. I always did admire red. You don't know how envious we folks who have to dress so plainly get sometimes. Speaking of plain dressers, have you noticed those upstarts who have come out from the city to live here in the Old Orchard? I mean Bully the English Sparrow and his wife. Goodness knows, my dress is plain enough, but I do try to keep it in order! But Mrs. Bully doesn't. Why, she doesn't seem to care a crooked feather how she looks! She and her husband are a disgrace to the neighborhood."

"I've noticed that they seem very noisy, and I judge by some of the sounds I have heard that they are not altogether easy to get along with," replied Chatterer.

"Easy to get along with!" Jenny Wren fairly danced as she snapped this out. "Easy to get along with! Why, we don't pretend to get along with them. We just don't have anything to do with them! They are beneath our notice!" Jenny held her head very high when she said this.

Chatterer chuckled. "I notice that they stay just the same, and, so far as I can make out, they seem very much at home," said he.

"Yes," sputtered Jenny, "they are at home all right. I suppose you know where they are living?"

"No," replied Chatterer. "I can't say that I do."

"You don't say!" exclaimed Jenny. "Well, they are living in that old house that Drummer the Woodpecker built two years ago and in which Skimmer the Swallow started housekeeping this spring."

"What has become of Skimmer?" inquired Chatterer.

"Oh, they drove him out and took the house away from him. It was the most outrageous thing! That's just what it was—outrageous! Now they've built a nest there themselves and I heard Mrs. Bully say this very morning that they've got six eggs! Think of that! I've no business to say such a thing, but I can't help wishing that something would happen to those eggs. Well, I must be hurrying home. Don't, for goodness sake, repeat what I have said."

With this off-busted Jenny Wren, leaving Chatterer in a brown study.

Come In and See the New Type E McCORMICK-DEERING

FARMERS tell us we've really got something in this new all-modern binder. What most of them like is the idea of getting gears under cover and putting fittings every place you need them for pressure gun lubrication. It looks like this binder ought to last forever if you'll take a minute now and then to give it a shot of grease.

There's more to it than that. Every day you use the binder you'll thank your stars for its light draft and its quiet, smooth operation. Enclosing all the gears keeps them clear of straw, chaff, dirt, and dust. Add to that the fact that the main bevel drive gears run in a bath of oil and all other gears are pressure-lubricated, and you have a great combination.

We'd like to show you over this new McCormick-Deering Binder, and tell you how you can take advantage of its great value by making use of the Income-Purchase Plan. Stop in next time you're in town, or give us a call on the phone.
